

First Aid Trainer Induction Week

- Become A First Aid Trainer

The First Aid Trainer Induction Week enables you to become first aid trainer and start your own first aid business, either as an individual business, or as an associate member of the First Aid Training Co-operative.

What will you gain on the Trainer Induction Week?

- Knowledge of the regulations which govern the first aid sector
- Knowledge on Quality Assurance systems required to run a first aid business
- Knowledge about insurance and public liability required for first aid trainers
- Knowledge about certification required for first aid courses
- A First Aid at Work qualification
- A Teaching Qualification for First Aid Providers
- An Assessor Qualification for First Aid Providers
- A detailed set of teaching resources required to deliver an Emergency First Aid at Work course: scheme of work, lesson plans, first aid knowledge, PowerPoint slide set

At the end of the week you will just need to purchase some first aid training equipment in order to set up your own first aid training business and run your own courses.

Alternatively, if you would like to join the Co-operative as an Associate Member you will need to complete our First Aid Trainer Assessment day at the end of the Trainer Induction Week. Once approved, you can become an Associate Member of the Co-operative.

This will enable you to run courses for your own clients under the Co-operative brand, and benefit from our national reputation, high performing website, dedicated Office Manager, Commissions System, Quality Assurance Programme, Insurance Cover, Ongoing Support from our experienced training team, plus much more besides.

What Next?

To find out more information, join our next Trainer Induction Week, or become an Associate Member of the First Aid Training Co-operative:

Contact Lorna in our office: 0333 433 0731, or mobile: 07585 723763

Or email: join@firstaidtrainingcooperative.co.uk today